

LET'S SETTLE THIS.

---

A WAC presentation by Jessica Lang.

THE CELT AND ROMAN INVASION.

How did the invasion start?

It all started in 43 AD when the king of the Iceni, Prasutagus, died and left his wife in charge. Before he died, he said he wanted all his possessions and money to be shared between the Roman emperor Nero and his wife Boudicca. However, it all went to Nero. This enraged Boudicca and she started a rebellion against the Romans.

WHAT DID
BOUDICCA DO
NEXT?

To start her rebellion, Boudicca decided to burn down Roman cities. This would be easy as the Romans had taken most of Britain at the time. First, she moved, with her army, towards Colchester. Next, they started on London and finally to St Albans. When Boudicca was in Colchester, the Romans hardly noticed. But, in London, Nero decided to send some troops to control her.

A circular inset image showing a group of Roman soldiers in profile, facing right. They are wearing silver-colored metal helmets with prominent red plumes. They are dressed in segmented armor and holding long wooden spears. The background is slightly blurred, suggesting an outdoor setting.

FACTS ABOUT ROMANS.

Some Roman food would include jellyfish, camel's feet, flamingo brain, sow's udders and horse meat sausages.

Cobwebs were used as plasters.

The Romans used crushed mouse brains as toothpaste!

FACTS ABOUT VIKINGS.

Viking helmets did have horns on them but only for special ceremonies. The rest of the time they didn't have horns.

The Vikings lived in Scandinavia (Norway, Sweden and Denmark) and invaded Britain in 793AD.

Our current days of the week are named after Viking gods.

DAYS OF THE WEEK.

Monday: Mani's day.

Tuesday: Tyr's day.

Wednesday: Woden's day. (Odin's day)

Thursday: Thor's day.

Friday: Frigg's day.

Saturday: Saturn's day.

Sunday: Sol's day.

VIKING JOKES!

Person 1: The Vikings used to eat whale meat and blubber.

Person 2: If I had to eat whale meat, I'd blubber too.

---

How did the Vikings signal from ship to ship?

They used Norse code! 🤪